FOREWORD

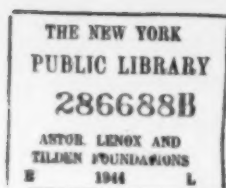

THE necessity for this index became obvious with the marked increase in citations from THE JOURNAL appearing in periodicals and other literature, and when requests for permission to quote from THE JOURNAL mounted. Since only one or two of the early volumes included indices, and not very complete ones at that, the only way to find an article was by leafing through the Table of Contents of each volume—a cumbersome process. The separate index for Volumes I to X will now permit much simpler access to references and for abstracting.

Work was begun on the index during the summer of 1940. It proved an even more arduous task than anticipated. It has been checked and rechecked until it is believed to be reasonably complete and accurate. The form of the index is, we believe, unique, and should facilitate use. In the Table of Contents a reference number is assigned to each paper, symposium, round table, section meeting, and to each group of book reviews and notes and comments. This number, rather than volume and page number, is used in all subsequent sections. The Table of Contents is therefore the master index, or key, to which all subsequent entries are referred.

The Table of Contents carries 525 entries, many multiple. The Authors' Index lists 415 authors of papers and discussants of papers, at symposia, round tables and section meetings. Abbreviated titles are used wherever necessary. Book reviews are indexed separately, alphabetically by authors. Of these there are over 300. Notes and Comments are not cross indexed in any way. The Subject Index was the most difficult to prepare, but it is as complete as we could make it. Complexities met in indexing long and intricate titles have given a clear idea of the need for definiteness and simplicity in titles, and this will be reflected in future policies.
